

A script from

“God Card”

by
Knox McCoy

- What This skit talks about the frequency with which people misappropriate their actions to God. We have a tendency to let God bear the responsibility of our actions, when we are really the ones making decisions. (Themes: God’s will, Justification, Selfishness, Laziness, Responsibility)
- Who 2 Males
- When Present Day
- Wear (Props) Very minimal. The two characters can just be on center stage, but they can also be seated.
- Why Exodus 20:7
Many Christians have a problem with claiming God’s will as justification to their own selfish desires.
- How Playing the “God card” allows us to escape responsibility by making a blanket statement, but it can be a terrible testimony to the world when we use God as a trump card.
- Time Approximately 3-5 minutes

The scene begins with two guys on stage. One should approach the other as though they have casually bumped into each other.

Will: Hey Pete. What's going on?

Pete: (Glumly) Nothing.

Will: Hey man. You seem down. Is everything ok?

Pete: I don't know. You know how I've been dating Jennifer for a while?

Will: Yeah.

Pete: Well, things just aren't working out. She's a great girl and all, but I just don't think I'm into her anymore, but I feel bad about breaking up with her. I just don't know what to do.

Will: Have you tried the God Card?

Pete: The God Card? What's that?

Will: Think of it as the ultimate Trump Card in life. If you don't want to be questioned about something, play the God Card and you won't have to explain yourself.

Pete: Huh. That sounds neat.

Will: Yeah. Just tell Jennifer that God is telling you that you need to be single. She can't question that, because if she does she'll be questioning God and no one likes to question God.

Pete: NEATO! The God Card sounds great, but how does it work?

Will: Basically, the God Card is the ultimate justification for any decision you need to make. It works so well because it implies that God has blessed a certain decision or situation.

Pete: What if I need to go into debt to buy something I don't need?

Will: God Card!

Pete: What if I want to quit my job and start a punk rock band?

Will: God Card!

Pete: What if I want to openly sob while watching Extreme Makeover Home Edition?

Will: God Ca...wait. You can just do that. I'm pretty sure you don't need the God Card for that.

Pete: Sweet!

Will: The wonderful thing about the God Card is that it tells others that not only do you have a direct line to God, but that you are also just an obedient soldier to the will of God. Maybe you don't exactly want to buy that new car, bet your savings on the Super Bowl, or take that new job, but if God wants you to, then who are you to refuse?

Pete: I love the God Card!
