

A script from

“I Do-Part 2! ”

by
Ted & Nancie Lowe

- What An old couple speaks of life, love, and lessons learned over the past 50 years. Themes: Marriage, Commitment, Sacrifice, Compromise, Faithfulness, Husbands, Wives, Submission, Love, Communication
- Who Steve-Husband
Jennifer-Wife
- When 50 years after Steve and Jennifer’s wedding (as seen in “I Do part 1”)
- Wear (Props) A cross-stitched picture
A roll of toilet paper with words scribbled on it
Music-Wedding March
- Why 1 Corinthians 13, Proverbs 30:18-19; Ephesians 5:21-28
- How This sketch works best if it follows “I Do – Part I”. Use each sketch at different ends of the programs or as a follow-up sketch the next week. Use the beginning of the sketch for humor, but do not be afraid to be loving and tender towards the end.
- Time Approximately 4-6 Minutes

Scene One: Wedding March plays in the background as Steve and Jennifer slowly walk out. The underlined portions of the script are to be read from the toilet paper and cross stitched picture.

Jennifer: We would like to thank you all for being here today to celebrate our 50th wedding anniversary with the renewing of our vows.

Steve: What did you say about bowels?

Jennifer: Not bowels, vows!

Steve: (Confused) Oh!

Jennifer: (Elbows Steve) Don't you remember, Steve? We're renewing our vows!

Steve: (Sarcastically) Oh yeah, thanks for joining us on this blessed occasion.

Jennifer: Well, some of you know how naive we were 50 years ago...

Steve: Yeah, that vow-writing thing was her idea...

Jennifer: Anyway, as I was saying, the vows we wrote when we were of the young and the restless...

Steve: Yeah, and now we're the old and breathless...

Jennifer: (Rolls eyes at Steve) The vows we wrote for our wedding day were to say the least...unrealistic.

Steve: I'll say.

Jennifer: So today, Steve and I, after fifty years, have finally decided not only to renew our vows...

Steve: We have decided to give our vows a major overhaul.

Jennifer: I have lowered my expectations for Steve.

Steve: And I have lowered my expectations for Jenny.

Jennifer: (Hands him something cross stitched and framed)

Steve: You sewed your vows?

Jennifer: First of all, it is called cross-stitch. Second of all, I framed it so you could read them every day.

Steve: Just where do you plan on hanging these?

Jennifer: I am going to hang it where you spend most of your day, where you can read them the most...the bathroom. Well, where are they?

Steve: What?

Jennifer: My vows.

Steve: I don't want to give them to you now.

Jennifer: Would you stop wasting these nice people's time, and hand them over?

Steve: Oh okay, here you go. But it's not because I spend all my time in the bathroom. (Hands a roll of toilet paper with vows written on the toilet paper.)

Jennifer: Steve! Why am I not surprised?

Steve: Sorry.

Jennifer: Well let's get on with it. I, Jennifer Lynne Hayes, do solemnly swear to do the following...solemnly swear...this is not a court case Steve. (Tears one piece of tissue off) I (emphasizing vow) vow not to talk to my husband while he is watching "Sixty Minutes".

ENDING:

Together: We have been through it all.

Steve: But more importantly...

Jennifer: God has been through it with us. Well I better get him home. He's grouchy for a week if he misses "60 Minutes".

Steve: Tell the truth, Mrs. Jenny, you need to get to a restroom before you lose it.

Jennifer: Steve! Well thanks for coming we hope you live to see 50 years of marriage.

Steve: Or we hope you don't die trying.

Jennifer: Well, good night.

They both start walking off the stage.

Steve: I'm glad this thing is over, my feet are killing me.

Jennifer: Something is always killing you.

Steve: Hey, this is our 50th wedding anniversary, isn't this considered a major holiday?

Jennifer: Close enough. (Pats Steve on the behind)

The end.
